

Interconnectedness for project work – a nature-inspired approach

For the interest of Schools, Institutions and Organizations design your European Development Plan for 2014-2020 and prepare for ERASMUS+ programme application for funding of your training needs (deadline 17 March 2014).

Embrace inspiration for project work and forming interdisciplinary teams, improve your skills of team working and make naturally successful results!

Let's learn from nature!

A variety of methodologies.

Comprising of presentations, individual reflection, pair work, small group activities, simulations, role plays, problem-solving exercises, case studies, activities in nature.

The exact content of the course is negotiated before and throughout the course to take into account the specific needs and developing interests of each group.

Care is taken to allow equal engagement of all participant.

Improve knowledge in collaborative/team/project work skills:

- understanding the roles in the team
- lifelong learning for sustainable development
- interpretation of natural and cultural heritage
- connecting project activities among different institutions (interconnectedness)
- improve efficiency and find inspiration for new projects

We invite teachers and other professionals in schools and other people involved in adult education to take part in our course!
